Dr. Teresa Wagner, pulmonologist and ICU specialist, has been experienced many collaborations with pharmacists at University of Washington Northwest Hospital. She knows what physicians can do and what pharmacists can do. She knows pharmacists' knowledge and skills so she respects pharmacists. She believes that medical treatment cannot be proceeded smoothly without support from pharmacists. She always expects to get information from pharmacists. These days she believes that physicians cannot pursue their work without pharmacists.

Dr. Wagner, therefore, hopes Japanese pharmacists and pharmacy students will support physicians and other medical staff so that patients will be able to receive much better medical care.
